Section C: Learning and development opportunities that should be included in the learning and development framework for foster carers

8. Please tell us of any specific areas of learning and development that you feel should be included in the learning and development framework after they have applied but before they become carers during their preparatory phase.

9. We are proposing that the new framework should have some mandatory learning and development for new foster carers (after foster carers are approved and before their first annual review).

Here are some core areas of learning that we are considering for the mandatory training. These areas of learning have been taken from the National Occupational Standards (NOS) in Social Services (Children and Young People). These NOS underpin the qualifications held by the social services workforce in Scotland.

- Communicating with others
- Health, safety and security
- Reflective practice
- The safeguarding of children and young people

In addition to these four core areas, please tell us below any additional specific areas of learning and development that you feel should be included in the learning and development framework for foster carers during their first year.

10. Please tell us below any other areas of learning and development that you feel should be included in the mandatory programme of continuous skills and knowledge for experienced foster carers (after first annual review).

11. If you would like to provide us with any other feedback please complete the comment box below.
